THE SABBATH.

The salutary effects of public worship are so numerous and so obvious, that they have not escaped the notice of the most careless spectator .-This institution of heaven has a direct and power ful bearing upon almost every interest of man, as a social, rational, moral and immortal being.—Few things have a greater influence over the friendly affections of the heart, than a regular attendance at the house of God. When around the public attendance and mingling our prayers and mingling our prayers and mingling our prayers and mingling our prayers and mingling our prayers. a social, rational, moral and immortal being .- Few taneous results. There is a social intercoursea mingling of affections in the temple of Jehovah. which forms a much stronger bond of union among men, than any thing which is excited in assemblies of dissipation or parties of pleasure.

The house of God, too, is a school of intelligence. Here subjects are discussed, and if the minister of the gospel be qualified for his office, in a manner calculated to awaken and engage the highest powers of intellect. The human mind has generally attained its most vigorous growth; and valuable those places where this institution of God has been properly revered. That the practical morality of the world is dependent on the instructions and ordinances which belong to public worship, has hardly ever been denied. A virtuous community can nowhere be found upon the globe, except in those places where the people assemble with conscientious regularity for the duties which are required of them. Heathen countries are proverbially abandoned and degraded, and those parts of Christendom in which little or no attention is paid to the Sabbath, approximate to the degradation and abandonment of the pagans.

But this heavenly institution is, by too many, treated with practical neglect. It might be supposed, that professors of religion would surmount almost every obstacle in order to visit the house of God upon the Sabbath. But alas! a frivolous excuse often robs them of all the blessings of the sanctuary. Some slight indisposition-which is sure to vanish before the light of Monday morning -or a little " cloud not bigger than a man's hand, is deemed an adequate apology for absence from the assembly of the saints. Alas, how can such persons wade through "much tribulation" to the kingdom of heaven? Some who make no profession of religion, are rarely ever in the house of God .-While the saints are engaged in acts of public worship, they are seeking their pleasure, or attending to their worldly business. As to them the s octuary was built in vain-in vain, has Christ purchased salvation for sinners-and in vain, does the messenger of the cross proclaim the grace of God to

MARY

Ay, so you serve us, 'Till we serve you-but when you have our roses, You barely leave the thorns to prick ourselves, And mock us with our barrenness

All's well that ends well. I know not how it is, but from my youth upwards, I always had a strong predilection for wandering among Grave-Yards, and contemplating those receptacles of mortality-and have often been led to say in the beautiful lines of Shak-

- " Death is a fearful thing-To die, and go we know not where, To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot; This sensible warm motion to become A kneaded clod, and the delighted spirit To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside In thrilling regions of thick-rob'd ice: To be imprison'd in the viewless winds. And blown with restless violence about The pendent world; or to be worse than worst Of those, that lawless and uncertain thoughts Imagine howling !- 'tis too horrible ! The wearied and most loathed worldly life. That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment Can lay on nature, is a paradise To what we fear of death."-

The last earthly rendezvous of wayward man is there. We see no difference then between the child of wealth and the out-cast pauper-both alike return to the dust from whence they sprung. -It was on one of these occasions, in wandering through a small village grave-yard, accompanied by the sexton, (a remarkably shrewd and conversant man,) that I was struck with this brief epitaph, on a plain marble slab, "Poor MARY," over which grew a Rose tree. The sexton, perceiving my surprise at this singular inscription, which he said never failed to attract the attention of strangers, began to narrate poor Mary's short but sympathetic story. Mary Bloomfield, the name of the maid that lies interred here, was placed by pecuniary circumstances on a level with the rest of the village lasses, but her mind, which was an index of her person, far out-shone any comparison that could have been made among her youthful acquaintances. She was innocent, and graceful as she was lovely-decorous and frank-besides so candid and open in her manners, that all who knew her loved her Mary was the only surviving child of aged parents, and they fondly doated upon their dutiful and affectionate daughter. But in an evil hour this healthful blossom was robb'd of all its sweets. A year has scarce passed away, since there returned to our village, a young soldier, who had distinguished himself on the lines, and whose father is the owner of the little cottage on the hill, which once was the abode of happiness and Mary. He beheld of making her so, wishes not to gratify the inclina-her—became infatuated—and marked her for his

Unable to struggle with extreme mental wretchedness, united to the severest bodily agony, she died! The parents of Mary, worn down with grief, followed their child to the grave a few months after they had seen her breath her last.

A Rose tree has been planted on her grave, an emblem of that spotless purity which held its seat in her bosom—and the only request she had information has been most extensively diffused in to make has been complied with. Poor MARY! She wished that these simple words alone should mark the spot where her remains were laid, that they might possibly awaken some remorse in her betrayer, should his footsteps lead him this

THE SERENADE.

The moon is coursing throt the sky, And on the lattice beams, my love; Oh! may her varying glances dye With pleasure all thy dreams, my love.

On forests dark, on flowery lea, She sheds her silvery ray, my love; And far the earth-born vapours flee Before the moon of May, my love.

Arise, arise, my gentle fair, Thy lover waits thy sight, my love; Swift to thy favorite bower repair. For soon will close the night, my love.

The moon is sinking in the sky, And early dawns the day, my love; The night-bird's songs in silence die, Arise, and come away, my love.

The above lines were sung with a touching expression, as I spnroached a beautiful country seat a shape from the city. A stillness, as of a grave rested on the earth, uninterry of save by the rich swell breeze swept by my ear. There was some thing magical in it-the romantic wooing of the lover, thus addressing his mistress when all the world else was wrapped in sleep; the lady herself leaning from the window, to watch the expression of the musician's countenance; the rich odour the passing zephyr bore upon its wing; the scarcely heard dash of a distant waterfall, all combined to carry my imagination to other days. My fancy, ever on the alert to catch an extravagant idea, instantly transformed the lover into one of those fearless cavaliers of yore, who would storm castles, battle with whole legions, and venture any hazardous enterprize to obtain the favour of his mistress. The lady at the window, appeared an imprisoned damsel, gazing from the 'donjon keep" of some persecuting admirer on the futile attempts of her lover to her rescue.- My fancy pictured the lord of the castle haughtily interrogating the intruder in his domains, and I could distinctly hear the still haughtier reply.-In a moment the swords leaped from their scabbards, and the parties were engaged in mortal combat. The lover prevailed, for he had driven his adversary to the earth, and raised his sword to perforate his bosom, when I rushed for-

The illusion vanished, and my surprize was only equalled by my embarrassment, when I perceived I had wrested a flute from the hands of the serenader, which returning, with as good an apology as the case would admit of, I hastened home.

When attracted by personal beauty or accomplishments, a man finds himself irresistibly engaged by the object who possesses them, is impatient of her absence, and transported with delight in her presence; when the acme of his wishes is the possession of so charming a creature, and he is indifferent by what means he may attain it : does he love her? Yes-as an epicure may be said to love

The man who, susceptible of more refined enjoy. ment, seeks in the object of his desires the agreea-ble companion, the sincere friend, the soother of his cares, and the partner of his joys, his counsellor and abetter in all the relations of life, in fine every engaging character in that of a wife, if he does not examine whether he is equally capable He contrived to have a meeting-and to professes to love, but his own exclusively, and

THE ESSAYIST-No. IV.

ON VIRTUE. I know of no consideration that should induce is more to the practice of virtue than this-that it is the surest and best means of obtaining happiness here, independent of the certainty it assures us of the bijss of an hereafter. It this consideration were more generally acted upon, viriue would have more followers, and the deformities of vice would be less frequent: the virtuous energies of man would then never pall, for the amicipation of enjoyment would add vigour to its efforts, and hough suffering under a complication of evils, the mind would rise superior to them all in the conficease to annoy, and that the permanency of virtue will surmount the obstacles which chance or misfortune may throw in our way, and give us, when these obstacles are surmounted, the truest relish and enjoyment in the long sought good. The vicious man can never be happy, however liberally he may be supplied with the blessings of life, for these indeed are but perpetua monitors of his own unworthiness, and are perhaps as sure a source of unhappiness to him, as their possession would be of consolation to those whose conscience would justify the enjoyment. The calm serenity of virtue keeps up in the mind of the good man a ray of pleasure that can never fail to cheer so long as its source is uncontaminated, or the efficacy of its influence acknowledged, and is no doubt a fair recompence for ills which outwardly afflict. The good man has a consolation even in adversity which is wholly unknown to those whose sufferings are the consequence of guilt, and the darkness of whose minds, where no radiation of virtue illumines, offers them no light of joy to guide their steps in the thorny road of trouble and distress-Virtue can endure with patience the trials ordained to test it, and draw consolation from itself of more substantial efficacy than all the promise of pleasure or the allurement of ease and thoughtlessness-it is the spring from whence emanates our truest pleasures, and it is rich in consolation when the hand of affliction is on us-teaching us patience and resignation to our lot; and tracing our calamnies to a higher source than the mere agency of mortal circu:nstances, it disposes to that state of mind when we are willing and proud to acknowledge that dependence on a supreme and invisible power, which should constitute the first and governing principle of an intelligent and ra-CLIO.

[For the Saturday Evening Post.] THE MEDLEY-No. I.

Youth is a time in which lasting impressions whether of good or evil, may be made on the mind -in which it may put forth in the luxuriant blossoms of virtue, or rank and noxious weeds may be suffered to overspread the fair prospect, and bury in their growth every excellent and ennobling quality. This is a truth so universally acknowledged that I should scarcely deem myself satisfied in bringing it forward, did it not, in a particular manner, apply to the subject on which

Every benevolent mind must experience pleasure in observing the progress of knowledge, and the dissemination of truth, Civilization has held out a helping hand to the untutored savage; the means of knowledge have been extended to the roving mariner; incitements are daily offered for the encouragement of industry and genius; and the happy season of youth has been chosen for the benevolent purpose of enlightening the minds of those who, but for the generous aid thus afforded them, might have worn out existence in abject ig-norance, or have descended to the grave loaded with ignominy and sname. I advert to the Apprentices' Library-an institution which reflects credulous girl, not aware of the arts of a liber-tine, listened to the ensnaring adulation with the her, with her affections directed to another person. I cannot think the expression of misguided applied to those who are enemies to associations of this kind Do they oppose those fancied dangers with the real and far more to be feared evils arising from dissipation and idleness? From books of an instructive and moral character every thing is to be hoped and nothing to be feared. But one of the writers in the New-York papers observes, " that he had managed to arrive at a good standing in business without any aid from books " If a " substantial credit?" (as the phrase is) be the summum bonum of all their wishes, then I grant they may justly seek nothing from books. Confined to the strict bounds of what is merely requisite to form a merchant, it will be granted that great abilities are not wanting. Almost every man or lesser proportion are placed in every one's reach, may without great flight of imagination, hope to be rescued from poverty, or even to attain to eminence in the commercial world. But are there no duties which, independent of the sacred one they owe to their creator, oblige them to give fame which is got by riches, is not enviable when possessor of wealth, to gain which the mind is left impoverished and empty although he may com-mand the applause and seeming respect of sycophants and dependents, can never excite the intentions which they hold in view.

Earnestly do I wish to these societies success adequate to the goodness of the

FFor the Saturday Evening Post.] ON HISTORY.

To those who desire to wander in the vista of literature, and to cuil from thence the fruits of knowledge, none affords so pleasing and diversidence that they must have a period when they will fied a scene as history, of whose advantages, many appear wholly ignorant To know what mighty nations have preceded us, and the events which have immortalized the names of illustrious predet cessors, are but insignificant when compared with the higher uses which its tablets disclose.

A discerning eye will perceive the causes which lead to the subversion of the greatest empires, and note the revolutions which time seemingly effects. The consequences of ignorance upon a nation, are there strikingly depicted, when the mind, degraded from its true standard, suffers itself to be hurried into the most dangerous extremes, by the flashes of passion or the influences of address. The effects of eloquence up in the illiterate have always been matter of surprise History presents us with numerous instances of armies fighting with fidelity in the cause of an usurper, whose winning oratory alone has possessed their ever variable minds This tends to show the mestimable value of education, which teaches us to view every thing in its true light, and to discriminate between the captivating splendour of prevarication, and the simple garb of truth. It will expose the qualities of the uncultivated mind, which naturally inclines to wards ferocity, is often subject to extreme mutability. As a country becomes settled, and the inhabitants inured to the government, the obscurity of ignorance gradually vanishes, and the resplendant light of science developes objects before unknown, thus affording both menual and corporeal employment. These things will be viewed with attention by a careful observer, who will not rest satisfied with bare facts, but will draw from them principles which will serve to elucidate higher and more important pursuits. Such a one will always bear in mind, that the greatest events often spring from triffing causes, and thereby regulate those anticipations which naturally suggest

The rise and fall of empires whilst they excite our admiration or pity, call forth the energies of the mind in describing their causes and explaining their effects upon the rest of the world,

Persia once the proud mistress of the world, rose from the settlement of a small band, who subsisted chiefly upon plunder, until civilization gradually intervening, unfolded to them better and more laudible pursuits. Commerce being incroduced became a source of great wealth, and the inhabitants of other climes crowding in upon them, as a nation, they soon found themselves the most powerful. But that which was the means of their prosperity, in after times caused their destruction, Luxur; extended her baneful rod over their region, enervating their minds, removing all stimulation for business, and gratifying only their baser appetites. All love of country fled, and I may add all those ues by which society is upheld and apported. Surrounding nations perceiving this rushed upon them, and they became subject to those upon whom better days had learnt them to look with indignation Thus they occuleated an useful lesson to others to shun the embraces of luxury, and to maintain a just quilibrium in all things when prosperity smiles upon them. Thus also Greece and Rome who successively rose to pre-eminence, teil by the same deciding bane, which overwhelmed Persia, leaving nought b hind but majestic ruins, ever calculated the highest praise on the community in which it is heighten carrosity. Here will I conclude, well her he made a declaration of his love. BALM OF COLUMBIA.

An important recent Chemical discovery. THE ladies and gentlemen of this city and elsewhere, are respectfully informed, that John Oldridge has fortunately discovered, by the power of chemistry, the grand desideratum of preventing Hair from falling off in FORTY-EIGHT HOURS. This balm will most absolutely, in the course of a whort time, make the Hair grow healthy and thick, J. O. is well aware that many fraudulent and impositious Gils, &c. have been imposed on the public, and therefore prejudice will be severe against his discovery, until trial shall convince his patrons that such a thing exists in nature as a certain preventative against the loss of hair. This valuable bahn will cause whiskers and beards to grow rapidly. No danger need be apprehended to the human system by the application of this capillary restorative. The public may rest assured that it helps nature, and is perfectly harmless.

Persons desirous of becoming agents for the sale of the Balm of Columbia, will please address the proprietor by letter, (post paid,) with a suitable reference.

Prepared and sold, at $1 a pint, or 50 cents for a half pint bottle, by JOHN OLDRIDGE, No. 551 South Front street, and at No. 11 North Fourth street, Philadelphia. MECOMMENDATION.

WE, the undersigned, do hereby certify, that we bave, in various cases, used the Balm of Columbia. lately discovered by John Oldridge, of Philadelphia, and have found it highly serviceable not only as a preventative against the falling off of hair, but also as a restorative. We, therefore, feel assured of its excellence, and consider it valuable and well worthy the attention of the public. In testimony whereof, we have added our respective signatures, and given it our warmest recommendation.

THE ALBION. Swift across the Atlantic's breast Sped the gallant Albion, When the sun set in the west, And the blush of day was gone-Proudly o'er the billows blue. Spread each wide extended sail, Then all hearts beat high, nor knew

Night her raven mantle threw O'er the waters, dark and wild-And the tempest-spirit flew Where so late the sun had smil'd-In the cloud-envelop'd sky Ruin shewed his awful form,

Death was lurking in the gale.

While the seaman's fearful cry Mingled with the raging storm. Then fair woman's dying wail

Echoed on the foaming surge, Mingling with the midnight gale, By Hibernia's rocky verge-Then the *chief who stood the fight By thy side, Napoleon, Trembled as the tempest's might Shook the fated Albion.

Hark! that shout of wild dismay-That death groan of agony, As the grave receives its prey In the deep devouring sea:-See the mountain billows swell O'er the reeling Albion-Hark! that loud and last farewell, She is heaving—she is gone! FLORIO.

FOREIGN ARTICLES.

A skirmish is reported to have taken place or he Pruth between a Turkish detachment which had passed that river, and the Russian advanced posts, in which about forty of the former were prisoners. The Russian forces on the Turkish frontier are estimated by the Paris journals at 300,000 men; the Turkish armies at nearly that amount, of whom 150,000 are Asiatic troops.

A Frankfort article of the 23d April says, " the numerous promotions in the Polish troops, and the measures taken by Austria to obviate the necessity of calling out the Landwehr, by increasing each regiment 300 men, are circumstances which promise a speedy rupture with Turkey."

Attempt of artificers to leave England .- At Cheser Assizes, indictments were preferred against Thomas Evans, Wm. Robinson, John Widdowson, James Shaw, Henry Hili, John Swindells, and Wm. Cocking, for attempting to leave this country and carry on their work in a foreign land, Mr. Williams was employed by them as counsel, and Mr. Brown, of London, as their solicitor, and at the suggestion of the Attorney-general, and by the advise of Mr. Williams, they were induced to plead guilty to the charge, and gave securities in 201. each and two other sureties h 201, not to leave England for three years.

The Damfries Courier mentions the departure of two vessels, with emigrants for America, from that place, on Sunday and Wednesday last; and observes- In the present group of 263 souls there are very few tradesmen; by far the greater number have been bred as farmers and farm servants, and some of them possess considerable property. One economical veteran, who wears 'a sack scarce ly gude enough for a linseed bag,' carries out with him 12001. in sovereigns, and there are numbers that can muster 50, 60, 70 and 100% sterling.

A curious circumstance occurred in the Collegiate Church, Manchester, on the morning of Sunday the 7th ult. A young couple repaired, very chains of Hymen. Already the ' white rob'd priest had commenced the holy rites—the trembling maid eatended her hand to receive the ring-the priest demanded of the bridegroom if he would have her for his wife, when behold he answered 'No !' and precipitately fled. It is impossible to describe the amazement of the forsaken damsel-she seemed as if awakening from a dream, and gazed horribly around, as if to seek her cruel-her perjured swain But alas! he was forever gone-he had vanished from her sight-and she was left to console herself, as well as she could, for her cruel disappointment

A young man in Methven lately paid his addres ses to a young damsel of the same place. After the banns of marriage had been proclaimed, the maiden thought proper to draw back. In consequence, he raised an action against her before the sheriff; but the case having been consequently submitted to arbitration, it was decided that the maid should pay 201, sterling of damages for her fickleness .-On hearing the decision, she offered to perform her original promise; but the swain indignantly refused her offer.

In the last seven years, the London Times has paid the enormous amount of 300,5871. 6s. to the British government for stamps and advertisement duty, "The Queen's trial, say the editors, a prodious monument of the wickedness and folly of the British Government, which we exerted ourselves n every way possible to expose-gave us an astonishing lift in the year 1820: in that year we paid the Government for the Times Journal, upwards of fifty five thousand pounds."

Liverpool, May 1. A singular feat of pedestrianism is now perform ing on the Regent Road, North Shore. A man, whose name we have not been able to ascertain, has undertaken to walk backwards, for three successive days, in 12 hours, the enormous length of 38 miles a day, being upwards of three miles an hour. About twenty minutes past seven, on Monday morning. he commenced his undertaking, and completed the immense distance of 29 miles at ten minutes past 7 in the evening. Yesterday morning about 5 minutes past 7 he renewed his arduous task, and, although the day was unusually warm for the season of the year, and the interruption from the concourse of people assembled to witness his undertaking considerable, he completed his performance about six amutes before seven. This morning, rbout the usual time, he resumed his task.

MR. EVERHART. liam Everhart, (the only surviving passenger in the dreadful shipwreck of the Albion,) to his wife.-The first account received of that fatal occurrence, stated, that only one passenger, and he from Boston, was saved. The distress of an affectionate wife, on the receipt of intelligence like this, must have been deep-But who can paint her feelings, when the tidings reached home that her dearest friend was the being, whom it pleased an overseeing Providence to rescue from the general destruction! Mr. Everhart has been peculiarly fortunate in this dispensation-his pecuniary loss is inconsiderable, a box of his, containing $4000 in silver, having been recovered; and his bills of exchange can be renewed.

"You may still be alarmed, but you need not apprehend any danger befalling me, for God is with me; he alone has protected and saved me, for when I was in the greatest danger my mind was completely composed; though I was sick all the passage, and of course was the weakest and most feeble passenger on board, yet I trusted in our Saviour, and I became strong, and actually underwent more fatigue, I believe, than any that got saved, and continued strong until I got safe on shore, when my strength left me-which clearly proves that God gave me strength, and presence of mind. But I am now very well, and shall leave here in a few days for Liverpool, or as soon as some of the sailors recover of | was made, the wounds received. A proof how composed my mind was, while I was in the greatest danger, and what confidence I had in my Redeemer, is that I actually assisted some of those who were drowning and crying for mercy .- The place where the vessel was wrecked was a high and perpendicular rock. I however got on the edge of one of them, and remained there about three hours, the waves beating over me; there was on the rock, at the same time, five or six others, who, I believe, all perished. You will not forget, with the little ones, to render humble thanks to God for my deliverance."

BREACH OF MARRIAGE PROMISE. At the last session of the Circuit Court of Queen County, New-York, Elizabeth Demott successfully prosecuted Samuel L. Smith, for breach of promise of marriage. The defendant commenced paying his addresses to Miss Demott, who is the daughter of a very poor but respectable inhabitant of Queen's county, in the winter of 1812, and continued so to do, till the summer of 1821, when he informed Mrs. Demott, that her daughter was a very good girl, but that he had changed his mind for the present, at the same time adding, that if he ever did marry, Elizabeth should be his wife. On the trial, however, he charged the plaintiff with want of chastity, and produced a witness to prove it, who, when the question was put to him, replied that he was not bound to answer it. His insinuations were treated by the court and jury with the contempt they merited; and the character of the plaintiff was sustained by the testimony of so many respectable witnesses that she seemed o acquire additional worth in the eyes of those posent, from the base attempt made to injure her regutation. The Judge in charging the jury, said, the Defendant had destroyed the Plaintiff's pece of mind, perhaps forever; he had gained her affections: he had tri-fled with them for a great part of her life (nine years;) and had without cause discarded and abandoned her. An exemplary verdict was required to satisfy the demands of justice.

Verdict for the plaintiff, two thousand dollars .-The defendant is supposed to be worth between three and four thousand dollars.

From the Norfolk Herald of June 3.

HORRID SUPERSTITION AND IGNORANCE .-A laboring man named Joseph Lewis, living near Deep Creek in Norfolk county, was on Monday apprehended and examined before a magistrate, being charged with having fired at with a gun and killed a free mulatto man of the same neighborhood, named Jack Bass. The facts stated in evidence against the accused were in substance as follows. The wife of Lewis had been for some time complaining of sickness, which both she and her husband sagaciously ascribed to the power of conjuration; in other words they were firmly under the belief that a spell had been put upon her by some secret enemy-or to use the technical phrase of the Bootian community in which they resided-that she was "tricked." To place the matter beyond a doubt, and at the same time to discover the secret emissary of Satan who had caused the poor woman's malady, the husband posted off to Portmouth to consult a female oracle, who has for a long time gained a comfortable living in that town by practising the abstruse art of fortune telling, at the expence of the credulous and superstitious from all parts of the surrounding country. This pretended unraveller of mysteries confirmed the suggestion of the wife's being "tricked," and gave such a description of the "tricker" as left no doubt on the husband's mind that his neighbor, Jack Bass, was the man. The impression which such a discovery was calculated to make upon a mind wrapped in the gloom of ignorance and superstition may be readily imagined but it could scarcely have been supposed that it would have led to so fatal a catastrophe. The miserable dupe is next represented to have gone to the dwelling of Bass, there to have perpetrated the horrid deed for which he was arrested. As he is in the hands of justice it would be improper for us to say any thing that might have the effect of prejudging his case-We shall only add that he was committed to prison-while the mother of the mischiof, the high priestess of ignorance and folly is left in the undisturbed exercise of her vocation.

Lead Mines .- The lead mines on the Upper Mississippi belonging to the United States, have lately been partly leased, and are expected to be worked on an extensive scale. It is said that the Indians, who own most of the mines in that country, can throw up more mineral, merely by the use of a hoe, or sometimes the bayonet of a musket, fixed on the end of a stick, than large companies have done in other places, after excavating for months with all the implements of art. As an evidence of this fact, one individual, in the last season, has smelted 7 or 800,000 pounds of the mineral, which he obtained after a short intercourse with the Indians; and it is thought not to be transcending the bounds of probability, to say that three million pounds of lead will come down the Mississippi annually, to St. Louis, after the works are properly put in operation.

A Bad Week's Work .- A Circuit Court was held The following is an extract of a letter from Wilin Westchester county, N. Y. last week, at which two blacks were tried and convicted for breaking and robbing the Store-house of a Mr. Bayles, of Torrington. What is somewhat singular in this instance, is, that they committed the burglary on Friday night, were pursued and taken on Saturday, committed to goal on Sunday morning, indicted on Monday morning, tried and convicted on Tuesday, sentenced on Wednesday, and safely lodged in the State prison by the Sheriff of that county on Thurs-

> Col. John L. Hopkins, who in the spring of 1819, had an affray with Mr. M'Queen M'Intosh, at Darien, in which Mr. M'Intosh was killed, and who was convicted of Manslaughter, and sentenced to three years imprisonment in the penitentiary, but escaped by the connivance, as was supposed, of the sheriff, recently arrived at Savannah in the ship Georgia, from Liverpool. Immediately upon his arrival, he gave himself up to the custody of the sheriff of that county. It will be remembered a reward of $500 was offered by the Governor, for his apprehension.

Remarkable.-Captain Johnson, of the schooner Florida, of New-York, trading among the Baltamas, has within a few months, saved the British brig Ann of London, twice. The first time he fell in with her ashore, on her passage from Jamaica to Havana. He bought the brig and cargo in that situation, loaded the Florida, got the brig off, and sold her to one of the passengers. The brig proceeded to Havana, and captain Johnson to St. Mary's, where he sold his cargo. Some time atter, he found the Ann ashore again on her passage from Havana to the River of Plate, with a cargo of sugar, indigo, &c. and purchased, and got her off a second time. He loaded his schr. again, and both proceeded to St. Mary's, where a great sale

Miraculous Occurrence.- Last week Mr. King a respectable butcher in Washington market, but who had been unfortunate in business, met his creditors, according to appointment, in the New-York Marine Court, where, in their presence, he answered to certain interrogatories. One of the creditors said to him, "Mr. K. are you willing to swear to all that you have said?" "Certainly," said he. The justice presented him the Bible, on which Mr. K. laid his hand, and while the justice was uttering the words of the oath, Mr. K. fell dead upon the floor!

The sudden death of Mr. King, late of the Washington Market, about the period when he was prepared to take the oath of insolvency, has created a deep sensation. To be struck sudden ly with death is at all times awful, but at the moment when it is supposed the hand is on the bible to take an oath, leads to the suspicion that something false was intended, and only arrested by the catastrophe. The solemnity of an oath should always be duly considered, but we apprehend, in this instance, that mothing improper was in contemplation by Mr. King, neither is the fact exactly stated. He was in the act of taking out his spectacles to read the oath when he fell dead. Mr. King was a prisoner on the limits, and was a poor man; he had nothing to give his creditors, and therefore could not have sworn falsely. His physicians have stated that he had long labored under an affection of the chest, which they regarded as hydrothorax, accompanied by an organic affection of the heart, which may have caused his sudden death, particularly when agitated by his situation. - Nat. Adv.

All for Love .- The Salem Register mentions report of a duel having taken place in the neighborhood of that town, between two gallants, who resolved to blow each other's brains out because they could not both marry one girl. They had two meetings. At the first they fought with muskets, at four paces, but neither shot took effect .the trepidation of one of the principale! A few more such duels we think would put an end to the practice, as the seconds, no matter how willing hey be that their friends should fall, would hardly encounter the risk of being shot themselves.

Dreadful Accident .- On Wednesday, of last week, pleasure boat was upset in a pond in Sutton, Mass.) It contained five ladies and two gentlemen. Four of the former were unfortunately drowned-Mary and Hannah Marble, daughters of the widow Andrew Marble, Nancy Tenney, daughter of Maj. Daniel Tenney, and Adeline Lombard. The gentlemen and one of the ladies saved themselves by holding to the side of the boat. The victims were from 16 to 20 years old - Providence Jour.

Fire.-Between 5 and 6 o'clock, on Wednesday fternoon, at New-York, an explosion of gun-powder took place at Vauxhall Garden, in a building used for preparing Fire Works. The building was immediately enveloped in flames, which communicated to the dwelling houses of Mr. Gilbert Coutant, and Mr. Jacob Shureman, thence to the store of Mr. Coutant, which with three buildings in the rear, were all consumed. Although the property destroyed was valuable, yet we have to comnunicate a more distressing event. A person by the name of Mullen employed preparing the powder, was killed by the explosion-another man, John M'Donough, was burnt to cinders during the conflagration.

NORTHAMPTON, (Penn.) May 28. In some cases more than twenty of these have been taken from the head of one sheep from half an inch to an inch in length. AGRICULTURAL PROSPECTS.

The neighbouring country, at present, wears the appearance of a very plentiful harvest, and the labours of the husbandman, in almost every instance, except as respects wheat, are likely to be crowned with abundant success. From some cause unknown to those most acquainted with the cultivation of grain, the Hessian fly, a small black insect that secretes itself in the lower parts of the wheat stalk, has made great ravages this year. The complaints are not confined to any particular section of the state, for they are nearly general throughout, and in other parts of the union, the crops have suffered in like manner.

On Tuesday and Wednesday last, the first Agricultural fair which has taken place under the late regulations of the State Legislature, was held near this city. Large numbers of fine Catales' army crossed over the late of every description, and considerable quantities of domestic manufactures, were exhibited. and prizes awarded for the best specimens of steros, amounting to upwards a stock. On Saturday evening last, about half past 8 o'clock, Mr. John Fullmer, of Callowbill-st, on his way home, near the second turnpike gate, on the Germantown road, was struck by lightning. The one horse gig wagon in which he rode, stopped at the turnpike gate. The gate keeper came out to receive his toll and after some time ascertained that Mr. Fullmer was dead, sitting upright in the gig. His clothes, hair and eye-brows were not singed, but on the right side of his forehead was a chocolate coloured mark, something in the form of a Z, and this was the only mark discoverable on his body or clothes His remains were interred on Sunday, in Spring Garden church burying ground.

got over the bar at Fort Mifflin on Thursday, and s now at Chester. Attempt at Robbery .- Between two and three clock yesterday morning, three villains attempted to break open the store of Mr John F. Warner, on the Germantown Road, near the Rising Sun Tavern. Mr. Warner being awakened by the noise they made in trying to force their way into the front of the store, hoisted a side window, intending to get out and call for assistance; one of the villains hearing the sash hoisted, ran round the house for the ourpose of attacking him before he could get out, but the discharge of a pistol at his head, within 3 or 4 feet distance, made him retreat again to his companions in frost. Mr. Warner then jumped out with a double parrelled gun, and found the same one he had fired at getting a pistol ready; he instantly discharged both barrels at him which brought him down-but the other two dragged him away before any of the neighbours came to Mr. W's assistance.

The villains cannot be particularly described, but the most daring of them was a remarkably tall stout man: he had on a pair of grey trowsers and a red flannel shirt. As there is no doubt but that he is wounded, any erson seeing him will aid justice by taking him ap.

DRAMATIC SUMMARY.

TIVOLI THEATRE-This Theatre situate in Market street, and being the summer establish ment of the Prune street House has been re-opened several nights, and attended by many respectable audiences. The preprietor has re-embell shed it, and decorated the Garden to which it is an appendage, in a very superior style of beauty. Yester evening Mr. Hutton performed Rolla, it being his first attempt in that character, with very distinguished applause, and Mr. Porter's Pizarro fell not far behind his usual good style. We are pleased to behold the restoration to the company of Mrs. Riddle, who personated Elvira excellently well. The Rose of Armgon; or the Vigil of St. Marks, a Grand Romantic Operatic Melo Drama, written by H. Judah, Esq. of New-York, author of the Mountain Torrent, &c. is to be performed on Monday. It is a true specimen of forcible genius, and of great soundness of judgment in the arrange ment of the parts, and the combination of the plot. Its success may be imagined, when the reader is informed that in the city of its birth, after having run several successive nights, it yielded for the author at two benefits 1800 dollars. Here are many redundancies however, which should be exterminated, and many little gentle plagiarisms which had better have been omitted. BALTIMORE -Mr Pelby made his first appearance this season, on Wednesday last, in the character of Rolla. Last night, the comedy of the West Indian, and the Liar, were the pieces for Mr Dwyer's benefit, in which he personated the parts of Belcour and Young Wilding This evening, a new pathetic melo drama called the Miller's Maid. was announced for representation. The Siege of Tripoli, and the Capricious Widow, for Mons. Labasse's benefit, on Monday. Mr Wood was to take his benefit next Wednesday evening.

FREDERICK-TOWN, (Md)—Messrs. Williams and Herbert are at this place with their company. PETERSBURG, (Vir.)-The Theatrical corps has dissolved, and nearly the whole company have repaired to New-York. Among them Mr. Russell and his lady.

NEW-YORK -Mr. Bancker and Miss Jones both of this theatre, have recently been addressing themselves to the Altar of Hymen. They were married at Newark, N. J. Mrs. Entwisle has returned from Europe. At the theatre, on Thursday eve, the Spy, or a Tale of Neutral Ground, and the afterpiece of the Spoil'd Child, were per formed-between the pieces Mr. Godeau exhibited some astonishing feats on the tight rope. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, of the Theatre, bad engaged their passage on board the Albion, at New-York, which vessel has been wrecked in the Irish channel, but owing to some difference between the Managers and Mr. Barnes, which the latter was determined to settle amicably before he quit found guilty of a similar offence, and condemned the country, the voyage was delayed—although it was anxiously desired by Mrs. Barnes, as she had received intelligence of the severe indisposition of her mother. These circumstances, so honourable to both parties, shows how very brittle is the thread by which mortals hold their existence.

Boston .- The new City Theatre, Washington Gardens, was opened on Monday last, for one night only, and will remain closed until further notice. The performances were the Point of Honour, or a School for Soldiers, and the farce of How to Die for Love.

NEW ORLEANS,-The managers of the theatre lately addressed a letter to Talma, the celebrated French tragedian in Paris, in the hope of inducing him to visit this country for the purpose of exhibit ing his talents on the stage, but it appears he declines the invitation, principally on account of the fatigue with which it would be attended, and the present state of his family affairs.

MOBILE.-The Mobile Register of the 4th ult. says, "We have the pleasure of announcing to the lovers of the drama,' that Mr. Judah has succeeded, at considerable expense, in fitting up the Hospital in a very neat and commodious manner, as a Shovels and Spades, Waggon Boxes, and a gene-Theatre. The boxes are judiciously arranged, hav- ral assortment of NEW HARDWARE and CUTing a full view and command of the stage. It is LERY, just received, and for sale on very low understood the company is expected daily, and is terms, by composed of several actors and actresses of merit." | june 1-tf

The treasurer of the Trustees of the General This establishment opened on the 29th of April. On the 14th ult was presented the Soldier's Daughter, and the Poor Soldier.

NATCHEZ-Mr. Pepin, and his company of Equestrians, lately gave a performance for the benefit of the poor of this place. The proceeds amounted to $260 50.

CINCINNATI -A writer in the Cincinnati Gazette speaks in very flattering terms of the performance of Bianca, by Mrs Hughes, in the tragedy of Fazio. This young lady has talents of the first order, and will probably advance to the most conspicuous eminence in the line of her pro-

FOREIGN.-In London, during the Easter holidays, great exertions appear to have been made at the different theatres to bring forward something that would attract attention. At Covent Garden a romance was got up, entitled " The Children of Cyprus," the splended scenery of which had a strik ing effect upon the audience. A looking glass was introduced as a scene, which occupied the whole front of the stage. The stage is half darkened: the wings, flies and accompaniments present a fairy bower-a fairy dance goes on upon the floor; Cupids, borne up by cords of roses, sail about in mid-air; and the mirror, while it shows in distance the body of the house, reflects the gay array more immediately which is passing in the front of the stage. A galley is introduced rigged an gilded, and a canal cut in the stage for it to sail upon; there is also a burning forest, in which all the trees seemed to be of ignited charcoal. Then there are snow scenes at which even a polar bear might shiver: and dresses which were calculated to throw the tailors of other theatres into despair. A new tragedy, by Lord Byron, founded on German story, has been received in London.

SELECTED.

From Garden's Anecdotes of the Revolution. Mrs Daniel Hall, having obtained permission to pay a visit to her mother on John's Island, was on the point of embarking, when a British officer stepping forward, in the most authoritative man- | ner demanded the key of her trunk, "What do you expect to find there!" said the lady. "I seek for treason," was the reply. " You may save yourself the trouble of search then," said Mrs. Hall, "You will find a plenty of it at my tongue's

An officer distinguished by his inhumanity and constant oppression of the unfortunate, meeting Mrs. Charles Elliott in a garden adorned with a great variety of flowers, asked the name of the Chamomile, which appeared to flourish with pecutiar luxuriance. " The Rebel Flower," she replied. "Why was that name given to it?" said the officer. "Because," rejoined the lady, "it thrives most when must trampled upon."

Mrs. Sabina Elliott having witnessed the activi to of an officer, who had ordered the plundering of her poultry houses, finding an old Muscovy drake which had escaped the general search, still stray. ing about the premises, had him caught, and mounting a servant on horseback, ordered him to follow and deliver the bird to the officer, with her compliments, as she concluded that in the hurry of departure, it had been left altogether by accident, HORRY .- A ludicrous story is told of him, that though probably varied in the narration, has its foundation in truth. Colonel Horry was once ordered to wait the approach of a British detachment in ambuscade; a service he performed with such akill, that he had them completely in his power: when, from a dreadful impediment in his speech, by which he was afflicted, he could not articulate the word-" fire." In vain he made the attempt -it was fi, fi, fi, fi-but he could get no further. At length irritated almost to madness, he exclaimed-" shoot, d-n you-shoot-you know very well what I would say-shoot, shoot, and be d-n'd to you!" He was present in every engagement of consequence, and on all occasio sincreased his reputation. At Quinby, colonel Baxter, a gallant soldier, possessed of great coolness, and still greater simplicity of character, calling out, "I am wounded Colonel !" Horry replied -" Think no more of it. Baxter, but stand to your po-t." "But. I can't stand, Colonel-I am wound ed a second time!" " Then lie down Baxter, but quit not your post." "Colonel, (cried the wounded man) they have shot me again, and if I remain any longer here, I shall be shot to pieces." " He it so, Baxter, but stir not." He obeyed the order, and actually received the fourth wound before this engagement ended.

When Yaniwerz first went to London, he lived at the west end of the town. One day, after paying several visits he found himself a little out of his latitude, and called a hackney, when this dialogue

Coachman, (shutting the door) Where to, sir! Yan. Home-mon ami-you go me home.

Coach Home, sir-where's that, sir?

Yan. Be gar, me no know-de name o' de dam street have eschape—he escaped out me memory ; I have forgot him-vat shall I do? Coach. (grins)

Yan Ah! you are gay-come now-you under--stand de musique, eh?

Coach Music! what's that to do with the street? Fan Ah! vous, verez-you shall see; (hums a tune.) Vat is dat?

Fan. Ah! be gar, dat is him-Marlbro' streetnow you drive me home, eh!

Coach Malbrook.

This is a fact-we have often heard that music hath charms, and can do many clever things-but this was, perhaps, the first time it had instructed a hackney coachman where to set down his passen-

"Give me a pound of Candles!" said a little enegro boy with a commanding air, as he entered a tallow chandler's "You might say, please," retorted the greasy shopman, sharply. "I would," answered Scipio with equal asperity, "had I not ha' brought the money !"

In a recent duel between two barristers, one of them shot away the shirt of the other's coat. His second observing the truth of his aim, declared that had his friend been engaged with a client, he would very probably have hit his pocket.

A reason for going to Church -Of an old citizen. it was observed, hat he was the most regular man in London, in his attendance at church, and no man was more punctual in his prayers. "He has a very good reason for it," replied John Wilkes; for as he never gave a shilling, did a kindness, or conferred a favour on any man living, no other man would pray for him "

Turkish Justice - The Turkish Ambassador, who was at Paris in 1798, bought a diamond of a jeweller in that city. While the bargain was concluding, one of his people stole a ring. A little child saw it, and told his father after the Turk was gone. The jeweller immediately wrote to the Ambassador, who sent him word that he should wait twenty-four hours. After the expiration of this time, the jeweiler received a box directed to him, which he opened and found in it the head of the thief, with the ring between his teeth!

THE SHARK

Is such a common enemy to our sea faring brethren, that sailors have as little compassion for this animal as he has for them. When taken, the work of butchery commences, and sometimes after he has been tortured and mangled beyond all hopes of recovery, he is consigned to his native element once more. This sea tiger follows a vessel for several days, and snaps at and swallows, indiscriminately every thing thrown in the sea. The sailors, taking advantage of this propensity, heat a brick flaming hot, which they cover with sail cloth dipped in oil very thick, and binding it tight with twine throw it overboard. The greedy glutton swallows it at a venture, and perhaps conceives it at first to be nothing more than a gentle stomachic. In a few moments the sea is all in a foam with his dving and spasmodic convulsions-and the upturned while belly of the monster, proclaims to the delighted marmers, that the hour of his tyranny is British Horse Races .- At New-Market there are two courses, the long and the round; the first is exactly 4 miles and 380 yards, i. e. 7442 yards; the second is 6640 yards. Childers, the swiftest horse ever known, has run the first course in seven minutes and a half, and the second course In six minutes, forty seconds. But all other horses took up at least seven minutes and 50 seconds in completing the longest course. and seven minutes only in the shortest, which is at the rate of more than 47 feet in a second; and it is commonly supposed that these coursers cover at every bound a space of ground in length of about 24 Engligh feet.

BALL ROOM NEWS.

FROM A LATE LONDON PAPER.

There is nothing without a reason, somebody says-and we believe it. It has been calculated in the best society, that there have been fewer marriages, annually, by one third, since quadrilles have suppressed English country dances than before.

The long straggling lines of girls, separated from their chaperons, in an English country dance, when the greater part of their time was spent in standing still, were much better adapted for those gentle murmuring dialogues which often "come to something at last," than the exhibition of quadrilles, where the intricacies of the figure and the difficulty of doing it well, require the full stretch of ordinary intellect, and supersede the half nonsensical conversations which not unfrequently terminated very satisfactorily to all parties. This effect was so visibly felt last year, that even in the very best houses, there ran a rumour of the restoration of the English country dances; but the idea was abandoned, as too serious an innovation, and the difficulty has been met by a half measure—that of withdrawing the chaperones into another room.

The life of a dowager with daughters is nearly as laborous and as dull as that of her own coachman. One sits outside of the door and the other on the inside; but except to see how their daughters get on, and when they are likely to get off, there poor old bodies (for the last ten years) have had nothing to do but to sit still and wait to take the young bodies home again.

In this state of watchfulness the eye of the matron detects (quite by way of amusement,) any mistake in the figure of the quadrille, or any little levity in the conduct of the girl; and what between dancing well and behaving well, the poor young creatures might as well have been cotillionizing of matrimony. But now every thing looks well, and we have little doubt, this manœuvre will be made as available to the great end of Matrimony as "Drops of brandy," or " Off she goes," in the olden time.

Manures of Green Crops .- All green succulent lants contain saccharine or mucilaginous matter. with woody fibre, and readily ferment. They cannot, therefore, if intended for manure, be used too soon after their death.

When green crops are to be employed for enriching a soil, they should be ploughed in, if it be possible, when in flower, or at the time the flower s beginning to appear, for it is at this period that they contain the largest portion of easy soluble matter, and that their leaves are most active in forming nutritive matter. Green crops, pond weeds, the paring of hedges or ditches, or any kind of fresh vegetable matter, requires no preparation to fit them for manure. The decomposition slowly proceeds beneath the soil; the soluble matters are gradually dissolved, and the slight fermentation that goes on, checked by the want of a free communication of air, tends to render the woody fibre soluble without occasioning the rapid dissipation of elastic matter.

When old pastures are broken up, and made arable, not only has the soil been enriched by the death and slow decay of the plants which have left soluble matters in the soil, but the leaves and roots of the grasses living at the time, and occupying so large a part of the surface, afford saccharine matters, which become immediately the food of the crop, and the gradual decomposition affords a supply for successive years.

Caterpillars .- Hemp is a great enemy to caterpillars. By surrounding a bed of cabbages with a row of hemp, the cabbages will be preserved.

Churning -After churning some time, throw into the churn one spoonful of distilled vinegar for every gallon of cream. When churning proves tedious. this will greatly hasten the separation of the butter.

To cure Hams Westphalia fashion .- Sprinkle your ham with common salt for one day; then wipe it dry. Take 1 lb. brown sugar, 1 lb. salt petre, half pint bay salt, and three pints common salt. Stir these well together in an iron pan over the fire till moderately hot. The ham to lie in this pickle for three weeks.

Rue - The growth of this plant ought to be cherished in every stock yard; nothing being more salutary or pleasant to fowls.

Guinea Corn - The stalks of this grain if press. ed, are said to yield a juice sweeter and of greater body than the sugar cane.

Carrota.-According to some agricultural reports, carrots will yield 600 or even 900 bushels has commenced the Boot and Shoemaking busi-

No. 41, SOUTH THIRD STREET,

THIRD DOOR FROM MARKET. THE proprietor of Port Gibbs, most respectful-L ly returns his thanks to his friends and the public, for the very liberal share of patronage bestowed on him since his establishment in business, and flatters himself, that from his prompt and liberal manner of conducting business, to merit an increased share of their approbation. Those trading at Port Gibbs, from the very day its flag was hoisted, (and they have been tolerably numerous) generally come to a good market, and many of them actually made their fortunes. In fact, it has become famous as a depot of trade, where investments are almost sure to produce a handsome profit-so much so, indeed, that the opinion strongly prevails, that fortuse has marked it for her own, If such be the fact, then all doubts must vanish. It must be the successful port of entry.—The proprietor, therefore, most earnestly solicits those in pursuit of a profitable trade, to freight their pockets well with specie or its representative, and set immediate sail for Port Gibbs. The present fair winds will bring the skilful sons of old Neptune, in a few hours, to anchor at this famous port of good luck, where hundreds of valuable cargoes are now for sale, at the lowest prices, to those who first apply. The proprietor also trades in Foreign Gold, Spanish Dollars, &c.
